56 Washington Students Among 108 Student Leaders Honored with Pride Foundation Scholarship Awards Totaling $438,000

SEATTLE, WA— Today, Pride Foundation announced scholarships to 108 students from Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Washington totaling $438,000—the largest total award in the organization’s history. Fifty-six students from Washington State were awarded a total of $216,300 in scholarships.

Pride Foundation is the largest source of scholarships to lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer (LGBTQ) students in the country. These scholarships, which range from $3,000 to $14,000, seed the next generation of leaders in the LGBTQ community and support remarkable students who are engaged in a range of studies that will benefit the LGBTQ movement and the world.

Students supported include:

Miki Cabell of Hoquiam, WA grew up on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota and dropped out of school in 6th grade. Miki, is now enrolled in a PhD program in education with the goal of becoming a teacher.

Erika Kumar, of Issaquah, WA, dreams of becoming a surgeon dedicated to working in war zones in the Middle East.

Cynthia DeVille, currently a student at Columbia Basin College, will transfer and study industrial electronics technology at Lewis and Clark State. Cynthia is the first openly transgender athlete in the Northwest Athletic Conference.

“These scholarships provide vital support to students who have often had to overcome enormous hurdles, both societal and financial,” said Pride Foundation CEO Kris A. Hermanns. “I look forward to seeing their impact on our community and our world, and I am thrilled that Pride Foundation has the ability to provide substantial support to enable these students to achieve their dreams.”

Since its inception in 1993, Pride Foundation’s scholarship program has awarded more than $4.8 million to 1,292 individual scholars.

Recipients are leaders in the LGBTQ community and they either currently live or grew up in the Northwest. This year's scholars hail from every corner of the region—from North Pole, Alaska to Kalispell, Montana, and Sherwood, Oregon and include native peoples from the Blackfoot and Cherokee nations, students of Irish, Jamaican, and Korean ancestry, as well as Latino/a/x and African American students, and refugees from the Middle East who now call the Northwest home. Their ages range from 17 years old to nontraditional students in their 50s.

This scholarship has proved life-changing for students like Miki Cabell, “The largest challenge I have ever faced is my inner landscape, and embracing the knowledge that this Gaelic/Lakota girl with a sixth-grade education and a GED she earned in Purdy deserves to be here creating a voice of authority. The financial support, along with the psychological lift of scholarship funding has made me dare to believe.”

The press and members of the public can meet these inspiring students from Washington at celebrations scheduled across the state. In Seattle, at Seattle's McCaw Hall, 321 Mercer Street, on Wednesday, May 31st from 5:30 to 7:30 pm. In Spokane, at Saranac Rooftop on Thursday June 8th from 5:30 to 7:30 pm.
